LOOK OUT FOR COLDS. A very learned instructor used to say that every severe cold shortened the life of its victim five years. When one considers how many have had their systems undermined by acute pneumonia, or a sharp stinck of influenza, or catarrh, this statement seems | in the United States. I like the Book Circle, bein no wise extravagant. Therefore look out for colds and avoid the causes that lead to their development in every possible way.

Besides the ordinary exposure of going out with thin-soled shoes on the cold, icy streets; of facing a sharp storm without the chest sufficiently protected; of sliting in hot halls and churches without removing the outer wraps, and then going out to be suddenly chilled by wind and snow, there are two certain causes of cold which should be carefully avoided. Of these, the first is shutting out every waft of fresh air by nailing down windows and stopping up crevices. The other is a constant irritation to the lungs by cold air breathed at night. Avoid these extremes if you would have any sort of health.

BETTER THAN PASTING. DEAR C. C. FRIENDS: I wish to share an idea, given me by an Iowa correspondent, with Charles Gale and others who have had trouble in finding a way to arrange postal autographs. Nellie and Lizzie Moore: Make a frame larger than an organ stool, and wrap it with crochet cotton or wool, in strands one inch apart and 10 cords thick, tying where they cross with cord that will wash, then with clusters of bright ribbon. THE BLUE JUNIATA. One of the most popular American ballads of 30 or 40 years ago, and beautiful still, was the following, written by Mrs. Marion Dix Sullivan, of Boston, sister of Gen. John A. Dix. Juniata, the name of one of the most picturesque streams of Pennthe tune from their fathers and mothers, if they do not know it already.

> Wild roved an Indian girl, Bright Allerain. Where aweep the waters Of the blue Junists. Swift as an antelope, Through the forest going,

> Loose were her jetty locks In wavy tressesses flowing. Gay was the mountain song Of bright Alfarata, Where sweep the waters. Of the blue Juniata. Strong and true my arrows are In my painted quiver Swift goes my light canoe Adown the rapid river.

Bold is my warrior good, The love of Alfarata; Proud waves his enowy plume Along the Juniata. Soft and low he speaks to me, And though his war-cry sounding, Rings his voice in thunder loud,

From hight to hight resounding. So eang the Indian girl, Bright Alfarata, Where sweeps the waters

Piecking years have borne away The voice of Alfarata Still sweeps the river on, TO NINA BALLOU. Like some golden sunboam pieroing Clouds that gather dark and drear,

In some dark, tempostuous moment When we least expect it near; So your gift came unexpected, But was welcomed with delight

For its beauty and the kindness Which and sent it on its flight. It was scanned with eager glances, Clasped by loving, friendly hand; Tokens sent in friendly spirit Brighten all the C. C. band. Thank you for the pretty token.

Shining now with others bright Where my eyes are often resting, Gladdened by the beautoous aight. -Eva T. Pryor, Providence, R. L.

A CALIFORNIA PLEASURE TRIP. DEAR C. C. FRIENDS: I am going to tell you about a little pleasure trip I took a few weeks ago. I was one of a party of seven. We started about 9 c'clock one sporsing, and after a journey of seven miles, up hill and down dale, up the Sespe Canyon, we came to our destination, which was a place called "The Dripping Springs." The Springs form a natural groke, surrounded by a perfect mat of maidenbair ferns. Oh, such a lovely place and uch lovely ferus! Some of the frends were a toot long. Instead of running, the water drips from been made by the "Etruria," in 1885, from Queensthe top and sides of the grotto. If small twigs or town to New York; distance 3,250 miles, in six days LOYAL WOMAN'S WORK long. Instead of running, the water drips from the top and sides of the grotto. If small twigs or leaves are placed where the water can drip on them continually, in two months' time they will be petricontinually, in two months' time they will be petri-fied into solid stone. The reason of this is the great amount of lime there is in the water. We found some nice specimens of small rootlets, twigs and leaves. One young lady of our party was very desirous of finding a small frog to tie under the water, to see if it wouldn't petrify him. She didn't succeed, however. We ate our lunch near the Springs and started home at 3 o'clock laden with ferns and specimens, and good appetites for supper.—Grace D. Atmore, Santa Paula, Cal.

> WINNIE VISITS THE C. C. FRIENDS OF THE C. C.: I was enrolled in the C. C. last July, but have not visited it since. Although I have not written, I have not failed to read all your letters. Think what a large Club we have, over 5,000! I believe this is the largest single Club cause I can judge the character of a person "by the company he keeps," i. e., by the books he reads.
> In the C. C. of Nov. 8 Geo. Scott wants to know what will become of a ball if dropped into a hole bored through the center of the earth? I, too, have heard that question discussed more than once. With the understanding I have of it, I think the ball would stop at the center. We must not suppose that its increment of velocity will be the same as a ball falling from above to the surface of the earth. It is entirely different; for after it has fallen a certain number of spaces, instead of gairing, it Il lose velocity, for there will be attraction behind it as well as in front, so as the mass behind it creases the velocity decreases, and by the time it eaches the center the attraction will be equal on

Annie M. Andrews, I think you are mistaken recommended us to read all history; and if they | cott, Vt. and, it would not all be a record of war. I rather like the wierd individuality of Rider Haggard, and for his uncommon themes, I judge of his popularity. Unlike some of our C. C. most certainly think there is much to be gained in friends, gather up these old scraps—the Editor was the perusal of his works. Speaking of our modworthy of remark; the latter, especially, portrays in "The Modern Belle" the scenes enacted in our late war so vividly that he has deservedly a place among our historical authors. Still, to me, none of our modern writers can even favorably compare with the Bard of Avon in dramatic force or power of conception. Nor can they equal Sir Bulwer Lytton, for the grandeur and loftiness of his style As a novelist he is my ideal. Who that has ever Lorens Garvin: The C. C. long since decided read "The Last Days of Pompeii," "Eugene Aram," or "Rienzi," could ever forget the noble sentiments they contain? Such works as his leave a lasting impression on one's mind. As Lytton says, "In science read by preference the newest books; in literature, the oldest." So, my dear friends, the works we want to become familiar with are the ancient writings; they are studies of some depth and purpose. The literature of our modern writers is lighter, and when one is weary and his brain overtaxed it proves, perhaps, refreshing.—Mamie C. Burke, Rosebank, N. Y. My favorites are Cicero and Virgil. What can be more beautiful than Cicero's oration for his friend and teacher, Archias? What more vehement than his orations against Cataline? And you, sons of veterans, do you not find enjoyment in the history of Cesar's Gaulie wars? Though I love the English writings, yet those beautiful ancient Latin writings hold my preference. The more I read the more I love them. How many agree with me? John James and Rip Van Winkle, will you not express your opinion on this subject?—Grace A. Johnson, Box 66, Benton Harbor, Mich.

The following formula is an excellent one for feeding young chicks: Give nothing for 36 hours after they are hatched; then give stale bread soaked in milk, and squeezed so as to be dry crumbs, three times a day. The third day keep granulated oatmeal in a little box before them constantly, and feed the bread and milk three times a day. On the fifth day give mashed potatoes at noon in place of the bread. As soon as the chicks will eat wheat, which will be when they are about 10 days old, remove the oatmeal and give wheat. The food may then be of varied character, a little chopped cooked meat three times a week being excellent. Cracked corn and other small grain may also be allowed.

This of course applies to the grain feeds, which should be strewn on the ground, outside the houses in Spring, Summer and Autumn, and inside in Winter and stormy weather. In Winter it is a good plan to bury a portion of the grain in the gravel floor of the houses. This induces exercise in scratching it out, and scratched-out food for the fowl is like | Anglo-Californian Bank, Limited, of San the "chatted food" of the proverb-doubly beneficial. Farmer. TO KEEP FRESH MEAT. In the Winter season it is often desirable to keep pieces of fresh meat, especially pork, sparerib, etc., as long as possible. Without a refrigerator or ice-house, it may be accomplished very satisfactorily by allowing the meat to freeze hard and then packing tightly in a barrel with snow when it can be obtained, and placing the barrel in a cold place. In this way meat can often be kept for months, and so lengthen out the period of home-made fresh meat. Care must be exercised and close watch kept when the snow begins to thaw that the meat does not get uncovered, as it will in a little time become tainted.
